

“There is so much art in building a game. In my mind the most important aspects of a game are mechanics and visuals. The visuals of the game are what make a game identifiable. No one would ever mix up a Call of Duty lobby and a Peak lobby because the creators made a decision for what art style and visual impression they wanted to build their games around. Peak decided to cultivate a more “cutesy” art style while Call of Duty prioritized realistic graphics to enhance the gore in their game. Art is so important in a game. Background artists, character artists, vehicles, etc. all get a different team of artists for design.”