

“My answer is going to be no different than anyone else’s. AI is becoming incredibly harmful. It’s hard to find a middle ground of embracing something that the world is inevitably moving towards, when it can so easily be harmful to just about everyone. Especially the concept of AI actors. That freaks me out. I mean, a production company went as far as to announce a movie in development starring an actor who has already passed. How is that okay? Not to get too dark too quick but what if there are intimate scenes in this movie? At what point is that necrophillia? What is press for this movie like? Will this deepfake version be on zoom interviews answering questions? What if this AI says something problematic and the real actor has no way to defend themselves or disprove a statement because they aren’t around? Even beyond the acting- the entire production of a film or television show will soon be able to be done through AI. I can’t remember what actor/producer said it but, an actor and producer who works in the field is looking forward to a time where movies can be “made from anyone’s living room” and is “completely customizable to any viewer”. Why would you want that? Especially working in the industry. That future would leave you unemployed VERY quickly. I am just so fearful of where AI is going. Who is going to have a job at the end of it?”
